As a philosopher once wrote, “Whoever fights monsters should see to it that in the process he does not become a monster. And if you gaze long enough into an abyss, the abyss will gaze back into you.” This quote reflects the entire premise of The Traitor Baru Cormorant, perhaps the best book I’ve ever hated. It’s unsettling and unpleasant and still weighs on me — and it is objectively a ...

work with them quickly and efficiently is a great life skill to have. Note, being fast at arithmetic is also quite practical in many professions, from carpentry to retail, rocket science, and making the trains run on time! However, math is about much more than arithmetic. A lot of what goes into solving multi-step word problems is identifying the ...

To learn math outside of school, I'd recommend study groups or lunch and learn seminars as great resources for committed study. In research labs, this might come in the form of a reading group. Structure-wise, your group might walk through textbook chapters and discuss lectures on a regular basis while dedicating a Slack channel to asynchronous Q&A.

Admissions officers have a discerning eye when it comes to reading letters. They'll be able to tell if you wrote your letter with reservations. If this is how you feel, then you may have to do the difficult thing and inform the student that you're unable to provide a recommendation letter. If the student still wants you to fulfill the requirement, she should know that your letter may not ...

Though both are great solutions, they each tackle different problems. Tutoring delivers or redelivers content, while our brain training goes a bit deeper and strengthens weak cognitive skills to make thinking, reading, learning, comprehending, and remembering easier. We focus on the underlying skills that are critical to performance and strengthen them all.

This app has turned reading from a frustrating subject to his favorite subject. He only plays for 10-15 minutes a day, as a supplement to our usual phonics lessons, but he has improved in every area by leaps and bounds, easily reading through simple books that would've been a slow, frustrating process to get through before. He is very motivated by earning prizes for his monster, and loves to ...

This is a useful point to bear in mind because most people who do a great deal of harm in the world are protected against the knowledge that they do so. Or they allow themselves to believe the endless accretion of paid flunkies and yes-men that inevitably assemble around them to come up with reasons why they are really doing good. (Nowadays, these are sometimes referred to as think tanks ...
